CAREER TIPS

Event management

Event management includes a variety of functions for executing large-scale events, which might include conferences, conventions, concerts, trade shows, festivals, and ceremonies. It involves handling the overall logistics of the event, working with staff, and conducting project management of the event as a whole.

What makes event management a great career?

There are hardly any jobs that offer you the same scope of creativity, socialising and travel than a career in event management. The industry is so varied that you can find yourself organising a wedding in the Welsh countryside one day, to organising a surf competition on the coast of Cornwall the next.

Working closely with clients to plan and deliver a successful event is extremely rewarding and the industry offers fantastic career progression. Sound good? Keep reading.

What are the different types of events I could be working on?

As a private or corporate event manager, you might specialise in a particular type of event or work on a variety of different events. This can include, but is definitely not limited to:

– Conferences	– Parties and weddings
– Cultural events	– Promotions and product launches
– Exhibitions	– Award ceremonies
– Trade fairs	– Dance shows
– Fundraising and social events	– Comedy shows
– Theatre performances	– Book launches
– Music festivals and shows	– Charity fundraisers

Benefits of being a freelance event manager

It would be challenging for anyone to graduate from an event management course and start working as a freelancer without experience or contacts. Ideally, you need to get a year or two of experience under your belt working for an event agency or in-house event department. Once you've gained that essential experience, the freelance world is your oyster.

10 benefits of being a freelance event manager:

- Flexible working days and hours
- You can choose your own clients
- Your overheads are lower so you could earn more
- You have creative freedom
- You can choose your diversity of work
- You choose the services you offer
- You're able to work remotely
- There's a high demand for freelancers
